

THE PEOPLE'S BEST NEW BARS – STYLE AND USAGE GUIDE

Congratulations on being a nominee for THE PEOPLE'S BEST NEW BARS competition! We encourage you create your own promotional material or even run your own vote-getting events, and want to make sure that if you do, you are using our very valuable (and proprietary) marks and logos properly. Please, keep in mind that this Guide is part of the terms to which you agreed in order to be and remain included in the competition. Please read carefully, and note the special considerations for social media, detailed in section 5 below.

1. What NOT to do

Neither the word mark nor the logo for THE PEOPLE'S BEST NEW BARS or the FOOD & WINE mark should be:

- Shortened – always use the “THE” at the start of THE PEOPLE'S BEST NEW BARS. (And power to the people! – it's THE PEOPLE'S BEST NEW BARS, not BEST NEW BARS.)
- Abbreviated – it's THE PEOPLE'S BEST NEW BARS – not TPBNB or another acronym; same goes for FOOD & WINE – never F&W or F+W (but see exceptions below for use in social media)
- Used with an apostrophe (other than in PEOPLE'S) or pluralized
- Broken up onto more than one line
- Made larger in part, or colored differently or used with varied fonts or anything that makes a portion of the mark stand out from the mark as a whole

The logo should also never:

- Be used as part of a sentence or part of a textual phrase
- Be added to, layered upon, obscured in whole or in part, resized in part, or altered in any way (other than a total re-sizing for layout, and then not too drastically, please)

For the FOOD & WINE mark:

- Never use “+” or “and” within FOOD & WINE – always use “&”

2. What to ALWAYS do

For THE PEOPLE'S BEST NEW BARS and FOOD & WINE word marks:

- ALWAYS distinguish marks from surrounding text with at least Initial Capital Letters or in ALL CAPITAL LETTERS. Marks also can be distinguished from surrounding text using bold or italics, or by placing the trademark within "quotation marks"
- ALWAYS use proper trademark notice with at least the first and/or most prominent use. That means adding an “®” as such: FOOD & WINE®
- Unless merely using the mark standing alone, use the mark as a proper adjective followed by a noun:

- Ex., “We’re a part of THE PEOPLE’S BEST NEW BARS competition this year!”
- FOOD & WINE® magazine
- ALWAYS use “&” within the FOOD & WINE mark. Logo color preference: black or red (CMYK- 3C 99M 78Y 0K)

3. Giving credit when it’s due

When using the word marks and/or logos, give us credit where there is a reasonable amount of space. The line should read:

THE PEOPLE’S BEST NEW BARS competition and THE PEOPLE’S BEST NEW BARS marks and logos are copyrighted material and registered service marks of Time Inc. Affluent Media Group. FOOD & WINE is a registered trademark of Time Inc. Affluent Media Group.

4. If you run your own promotional events

If you run your own promotions or events, please keep in mind that you should run it by your own legal counsel first, especially if you hold any contests or sweepstakes. No matter what you do, please find a place on your displays and/or communications to add the following:

While THE PEOPLE’S BEST NEW BARS competition is the intellectual property of Time Inc. Affluent Media Group (TIAMG), this promotional event is not sponsored or endorsed by TIAMG in any way and TIAMG does not, and will not, assume any liability or responsibility for any damage, expense, inconvenience, and/or loss to any persons or property whatsoever.

You may add the trademark attribution line in section 3 before or after this statement, too.

5. Social media usage

Okay, we get it: it’s a long name for a competition. Not exactly ideal for a 140-character message, or easy to fit all on one line in a post. Within posts or conversations where more space is available, please, do endeavor to use the mark as set forth in numbers 1-4 above.

For social-media platforms with more limited space, such as Twitter or Instagram, we have established official hashtags and handles to make reference to the competition. These include our Twitter handle @foodandwine and the hashtag #FWBestBars. (We will keep you informed as we create more. We do want you to use these – and will be on the watch for retweeting opportunities!) But . . . unless you have our express, prior, emailed permission, you may not create and/or use a hashtag, handle, or other identifier (including a URL or URL extension) using the marks or a version of them. Please contact us at the email below at your earliest convenience if you are contemplating the use of one of these social-media tools in that way.

Please contact Chelsea.Morse@foodandwine.com with any questions. Good luck!!
